

GERMAN ARMY RETREATING BEFORE ADVANCES OF THE FRENCH-ENGLISH ARMIES

ENGLISH CAVALRY REPORTED AS MOST ACTIVE IN ATTACKING ITS FOE.

CONTINUOUS FIGHTING

Danger of Siege of Paris is Now Thought to Be Over—Germans Capture Important Fortresses.

The fall of Maubeuge, a strong French fortress, six miles from the Belgian frontier, is announced at the German army headquarters.

Up to early afternoon no further official light had been thrown on what is probably the greatest battle of the war, being fought east of Paris from Montmarail to Verdun to Nancy.

Three million men are said to be engaged. A news dispatch from Paris indicates a belief there that the German offensive against the city has been definitely checked.

According to a dispatch from Copenhagen Emperor William sent a message to President Wilson protesting that the British were using dum dum bullets and that Belgium noncompetents were harassing the Germans.

It is indicated that Roumania will soon throw her 200,000 troops into the conflict. A dispatch from Berlin says that the Bucharest correspondent of the Cologne Gazette reports a strong sentiment in favor of Russia throughout Roumania.

Advices from the Hague are that a state of siege has been proclaimed on a great number of towns on the coast of Holland.

Russia is reported as assuming the offensive in East Prussia and news from Berlin says that all eyes in the German capital are turned eastward, where the importance of administering a check to the invading Russians appears quite as great as the vigorous pursuit of the French campaign.

The Russians are reported as having pushed their advance sixty miles southwest of Koenigsburg.

Official confirmation of the reports that Russian troops are in France are still lacking.

An English correspondent who has reached Milan from Vienna, describes Austria as bankrupt and its people in panic. Bosnia, he says, is in open revolt. The situation is due to the failure of the Austrians against the Russians.

Anxiety for the Finnish passenger steamer Sveaborg, bound from Raumo, Finland, for Stockholm, is felt in the latter city. The vessel has many British and American on board and is overdue.

British officers arrived in Paris today reports that the battle east of the city is still continuing.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 8.—President Wilson on Tuesday signed a proclamation calling for a national day of prayer on October 4, in honor of the cessation of war in Europe.

The proclamation was as follows:

"Whereas, great nations of the world have taken up arms against one another and war draws millions of men into battle whom the counsel of statesmen have not been able to save from the terrible sacrifices, and whereas, it is the special wish and duty to seek counsel and success of Almighty God, humbling ourselves before Him, confessing our weakness and our lack of any wisdom equal to these things; and

"Whereas, it is the especial wish and longing of the people of the United States, in prayer and counsel and in unanimity, to serve the cause of the peace.

Therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, president of the United States of America, do assign Sunday, the fourth day of October, next, a day of prayer and supplication, and do request all God-fearing persons to repair on that day to their places of worship there to unite their petitions to Almighty God, that, overruling the counsel of men, setting straight the things they do not govern or alter, taking pity on the nations now in the throes of conflict, in His goodness and mercy, show a way where men can see none. He vouchsafe His children, healing peace again, and restore once more that concord among men and nations without which there can be neither happiness nor true friendship, nor any whole fruit of toil or thought in the world of ours; and thus end that He forgive us our sins, our ignorance of His holy will, our wilfulness and many errors, and lead us in the paths of obedience to places of vision and to thoughts and counsels that purge and make wise."

Washington Report.

Washington, Sept. 8.—A Bordeaux dispatch to the French embassy says: "On the seventh the French and English offensive had compelled the Germans to withdraw. Two of its army corps have been thrown on the left side of the Ourea river."

"The fourth army has attacked us in the Vitre-La-Francois region. A falling back movement of the enemy has been clearly observed."

"The success of the Russians continues against the Austrians whose forty-fifth regiment of infantry has surrendered in its entirety."

From Paris.

Paris, Sept. 8.—An official communication issued this afternoon says the situation remains satisfactory. The German right is retreating before the English. The French center is slowly advancing. The situation on the right is unchanged. The statement says: "First: On the left wing although the Germans have been reinforced, the situation remains satisfactory. The enemy is retreating before the British army."

"Second: At the center our advance is slow but general. On the right wing there has been no action of the enemy against the great right of Nancy. In the Vosges and in Alsace the situation remains unchanged."

English Report.

Washington, Sept. 8.—The British embassy today received the following dispatch from its foreign office:

"Following is the official communication of the French government of September 8th:

RED CROSS STEAMER WILL SAIL THURSDAY

SHIP CARRYING 150 AMERICAN NURSES TO EUROPEAN BATTLEFIELDS, READY FOR VOYAGE.

SEEK A NEUTRAL CREW

French and British Consuls at New York Object to German Seamen Causing Delay in Sailing.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, Sept. 9.—With her fires banked, the steamship Red Cross remained at her anchorage in the Hudson river today, awaiting orders to start on her voyage to the aid of the wounded on European battlefields.

Her sailing was delayed yesterday by the interference of the British and French governments which objected to any man in the crew up to seventy being other than an American.

Object to German Crew.

When the ship was taken over by the Red Cross line, sixty per cent of her crew were Germans who, it is declared, had taken out their first American citizenship papers in anticipation of the trip. Captain Rust said it was impossible to get a full American crew without necessitating his sending to the Great Lakes and Boston, and other seaport cities.

He said also he would keep the Americans now on board and make up the rest of the crew with men from neutral countries. This seemed agreeable to the consul general Spaniards.

A representative was sent to Washington and Baltimore to engage negro chefs and waiters. Unless a further delay, it was expected that the Red Cross would put to sea tomorrow.

Big Corps of Nurses.

The expedition includes 150 Red Cross nurses and sixty doctors, who will minister to the sick and wounded on the European battlefields. On the ship are thousands of pounds of absorbent and non-absorbent cotton, gauze and hospital equipment. The liner is painted white with a great red band clear around the ship amidships. On the funnel, which is also painted white, is the red insignia of the International Red Cross.

Capt. Armstrong, U. S. N., is in command of the expedition. The first port that the ship will touch on her arrival in European waters is Falmouth, England, where four Red Cross units will be landed, two for service with the English and two for service with the Russian armies. The fact that the Russian units are to be landed in England is taken by some persons as a further proof of the report to the effect that a large force of Russian troops had been brought into England via the northern route to reinforce the allied armies in France. Two units of the French army will be landed at Havre, which is the second port of call, one unit at Antwerp for the Belgians and three units at Rotterdam, of which two will be for service with the German and the third with the Austro-Hungarian armies. The Serbian unit will proceed to a Grecian port on a medical director, two medical assistants, a supervising nurse, and eleven nurses.

Major Patterson in Charge.

In charge of all the units will be Major Robert U. Patterson, medical corps, U. S. A., while Miss Helen Scott Hay will be the general superintendent in charge of the nurses. Miss Hay's chief assistants will be Miss Katrina E. Herlitz and Miss Beatrice Bowman.

MYSTERY IN MURDER OF CHICAGO DENTIST

Man Found Dead in Vacant Building Said to Have Been Killed by Blow on Head—Robbery as Motive.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, Sept. 9.—Police have uncovered no clue to the slayer of Dr. B. J. Roberts, a wealthy dentist, who was found mysteriously wounded and dying yesterday in a vacant building near his residence. Physicians after examining the body which bore evidence of a desperate assault said they believed death resulted from a blow on the head.

The police, however, were puzzled by the finding beside the body a bottle which had obtained poison, and gas pouring from an open jet. Theory was advanced that the dentist has been murdered and that his slayer had left evidences calculated to make the crime appear a suicide.

Dr. Roberts, who disappeared Sunday carried a huge sum of money according to his widow. The fact that the dead man's purse was empty and his clothing disarranged were taken as indicating robbery.

EXPLAIN SHOOTING OF GERMAN OFFICER

Late Version of Ghent Incident Greatly Minimizes Its Serious Character.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, September 9.—A dispatch to Reuters telegram company gives the late version of the shooting of a German officer in Ghent which has considerably modified the seriousness of the case. One of the German wounded admitted at the hospital that he had lost his road.

The wounded officer has been taken under the protection of the American consul and will not be a prisoner of war. The burgomaster after explaining the case to the German commander made the statement that the German officer was not to enter the city which was not to be a result of the incident.

A dispatch to the exchange telegraph company from Ghent evidently incident referred to the late version of the case. It says that an incident which may lead to serious consequences has just happened in Ghent. In spite of the agreement two German officers entered the city and were surprised by Belgian troops who fired on them from Mitralleuses mounted on an automobile. One officer was killed and the other seriously wounded.

Czar Resolves to Enter German Capital if It Costs Every Soldier—Two Thousand Killed at Lemberg.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Sept. 9.—The Evening News has published a dispatch from its Rome correspondent who says that Emperor Nicholas is reported in Rome to have made the following declaration:

"I am resolved to go to Berlin itself even if it costs me my last mouthful."

Tells of Fight.

Rome, Sept. 9, via London.—A dispatch from Petrograd to the Evening News declares that the great battle at Rawa, in Galicia, thirty-three miles northwest of Lemberg, is over, and that the Russians have won a complete victory.

The Austrians are said to be retreating everywhere. Among the prisoners taken by the Russians are a large number of Germans. The Austrians have evacuated Russian Poland.

Italian Regiment.

Trieste, Austria, Sept. 8.—The defeat of the Austrians at Lemberg has created a deep impression at Trieste and all along the Adriatic coast. The regiment which suffered most were composed of men of Italian origin. The Austrian infantry was recruited almost entirely from Trieste Italians. This organization was totally annihilated, two thousand men being left on the field and only sixty-five returning.

London, Sept. 8.—A telegram received here from Bucharest, Roumania, says the Russian victories in Galicia over the forces of the dual monarchy have aroused the Roumanians to almost fanatic excitement. Thousands of Roumanians demonstrated yesterday in the streets of Bucharest in favor of Russia and France.

Servians Active.

Paris, Sept. 8.—A dispatch to the Havas agency from Nish, Servia, says the Servians are continuing their offensive movement against the Austrians in the direction of Vahgrad. They crossed the frontier September 6th and continued to advance successfully. Everywhere the Austrians are being driven back to the left banks of the river Drina.

Activity in Austria.

Washington, Sept. 9.—The Russian embassy here today issued the following statement: "On Sept. 8th a general engagement continued along the whole of the Austrian front. In the center the Austrian army is falling back. Near Rava Ruska a stubborn battle is being fought with considerable losses on both sides. Our troops are also attacking a strongly fortified position at Vorodok, west of Lwow. On the left bank of the Vistula river our advance is developing very favorably."

HERE'S "WAR DICTIONARY" IN WHICH TERMS OFTEN USED ARE DEFINED.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Chicago, Sept. 9.—Roger C. Sullivan's fight for the Democratic senatorial nomination overshadowed every other element in the state-wide primaries when Illinois voters went to the polls today. Other parties were to nominate their senatorial candidates, congressional nominees for legislative offices were to be picked, but the fight within the Democratic ranks was of national interest.

Backed by a majority of the state organization and 18 of the 28 presidential electors, Sullivan conducted a strenuous speaking campaign that reached into nearly every county of Illinois, and Sullivan's principal opponent for the nomination, has the endorsement of Secretary of State Bryan, United States Senator Lewis, Mayor Harrison, Chicago, and Senator Owens of Oklahoma, who made against Sullivan early in the spring. Despite these odds the former national committeeman today confidently predicted that neither Sullivan nor James F. Frayne, the other Illinois candidate, would be elected.

The big suffragette vote that played such an important part in the election of 1912, and in any of the important contests today, is obtained "half-rights" in Illinois by legislative enactment, but while voters and for municipal officers, they have not yet achieved the privilege of voting for offices created under the state constitution.

Illinois primaries today in the Republican primary fight was very tame. Senator Lawrence Sherman was generally conceded the nomination to succeed himself over William Raymond Robins, the Progressive candidate is not opposed. The Progressive interest today lay largely in the Democratic primaries because of the prevailing opinion that the nomination of Sullivan will be the support of many Progressive Democrats to the Bull Moose candidate in November.

A number of candidates are pursuing the nomination of state, congressional and state legislative offices. Twenty Democrats, for example, have filed for state treasurer and for number for clerk of the supreme court. The Progressive party is seeking to elect its own executive officer to each of the three leading parties.

The state will not have to seek new members for the national House of Representatives. More present and former congressmen are in today's fight for nomination than there are seats to fill. With the exception of George E. Gorman of the third district, and Stephen A. Hoxworth of the fifteenth district, both Democrats, every present member of the Illinois delegation is striving to come back.

In the eighteenth district "Uncle Joe" Cannon's efforts to win the Republican nomination and eventually the presidency were aided by Elmer B. Cooley, also of Denver, who has the chance at O'Hair's scalp. In the fourth district in Chicago, James T. McInerney, who resigned his seat under fire after the Muller investigation is seeking "vindication" by contending again for the Democratic nomination against the flock of anti-stockyard Democrats. Representative James E. Mann, Republican leader in the House, has no opposition for the Republican nomination in the second district but will have a stiff fight in November.

In the nineteenth district William B. McKinley, Taft leader and former congressman, is the sole aspirant for the Republican nomination to oppose Congressman Borchers, Democrat, in the November election.

Democratic, Republican, Progressive and Socialist parties all have candidates in every district in the state. This keen competition for nomination will be carried into the scrap for legislative offices and the charges of minor places to be filled on city and county tickets.

By paying the costs of the court action Lena Iola Stevo, the gypsy woman arrested Monday for the theft of twenty dollars from Ole Tosten, of Ordway, was released from the county jail and the charges dismissed by Judge Maxfield. The entire tribe, which is from Oklahoma, was given a limited time to leave the city and the Queen Stevo, departed for Detroit last night.

Wanted! Initiative

Necessity mothers invention. It is no time for American industry to sit down and bewail the fact that we need certain raw materials.

If we need dye stuffs—make them at home.

If raw sugar and wool are in demand so much better for the cane growers and farmers.

If we need dye stuffs—tap our own mines—the ores are there.

"Bewildered, he darted to the girl's side, with a shout, demanding to know what was the matter. She turned to him a face he hardly recognized—but still he didn't understand. The inevitable inference seemed a thing unthinkable; his brain faltered when asked to credit it. Only when he saw her tearing frantically at the painter, striving to cast it off and with it the dory towing a hundred feet or so astern, and when another wondering glance had discovered the head and shoulders of Mr. Barcus rising over the stern of the dory as he strove to lift himself out of the water—only then did Alan begin to appreciate what had happened.

Even so, it was with the feeling that all the world and himself as well had gone stark, raving mad, that he seized the girl and, despite her struggles, tore her away from the rail before she had succeeded in unhooking the painter. "Rose!" he cried stupidly. "Rose! What's the matter with you? Don't you see what you're doing?"

Defiance inflamed her countenance and accents. "Can't you ever say anything but 'Rose! Rose! Rose!'? Is there no other name that means anything to you? Can't you understand how intolerable it is to me? I love you no less than she—better than she ever dreamed of loving you—because I hate you, too! What is love that is no more than love? Can't you understand?"

"Judith!" he cried in a voice of stupefaction. "But—Good Lord!—how did you get aboard? Where's Rose?"

"Where you'll not find her easily again," the woman angrily retorted. "Trust me for that!"

"What do you mean?" Illumination came in a blinding flash. "Do you mean it was you who brought aboard last night?"

"Who else?"

"You waylaid her there in the hotel, substituted yourself for her, deceived me into thinking you—!"

"Of course," she said simply. "Why not? When I saw her sleeping there, the mirror of myself, completely at my mercy—what else should I think of than to take her place with the man I loved? I knew you'd never know the difference—at least I was fool enough for the moment to believe I could stand being loved by you in her name! It was only today, when I'd had time to think, that I realized how impossible that was!"

A sudden slap of the mainsail boom shaverhips and a simultaneous cry from over the stern roused Alan from his consternation to fresh appreciation of the emergency. With scant consideration he hustled the woman to the companionway and below, slammed the doors and closed her in with the sliding hatch—all in a breath—then, spring to the taffrail, just in time to lend a helping hand sorely wanted by Mr. Barcus in his efforts to climb aboard, after he had pulled the dory up under the stern by his painter.

He came over the rail in a towering temper. "I hope you'll pardon the apparent impertinence," he suggested acidly, as soon as able to articulate coherently—"but may I inquire if that bloody-minded rixen is your blushing bride-to-be?"

Alan shook a helpless head. The thing defied reasonable explanation. He made a feeble stagger at it with-out much satisfaction either to himself or to the outraged Barcus.

"No—it's all a damnable mistake! She's her sister—I mean, the right girl's sister—and her pretense double-fooled me—not quite right in the head, I'm afraid."

"You may well be afraid, you poor fiend!" Mr. Barcus snapped. "You know what she did? Threw me overboard! Fact! Came on deck a while ago, sweet as peaches—and all of a sudden whips out a gun as big as a cannon, points it at my head and orders me to luff into the wind. Before I could make sure I wasn't dreaming, she had fired twice—in the air—a signal to that blessed fisherman astern there—at least, they answered with two toots of a power whistle and changed course to run up to us. Look how she's gained already!"

"But how did she happen to throw you overboard?"

"Happen nothing!" Barcus snapped, getting to his feet. "She did it a purpose—flew at me like a wildcat, and before I knew what was up—I was slammed backwards over the rail."

"I can't tell you how sorry I am," Alan responded gravely. "There's more to tell—but one thing to be done first."

"And that?" Mr. Barcus inquired suspiciously.

"To get rid of the lady," Alan announced firmly. "Make that fisherman a present of the woman in the case. You don't mind parting with the dory in a good cause—if I pay for it?"

"Take it for nothing," Barcus grumbled. "Cheap at the price!"

He took Alan's place, watching him with a sardonic eye as he drew the tender in under the leeward quarter, made it fast, and reopened the companionway.

As the girl came on deck without other invitation, in a sudden rage that only heightened her wonderful loveliness, Alan noted that her first look was for him, of untempered malignity; her second, for Barcus, with a curling lip; her third, astern, with a glimmer of satisfaction as she recognized how well the fisherman had drawn up on the Seaventure.

"Friends of yours, I infer?" Alan inquired civilly.

Judith nodded.

"Then it would save us some trouble—yourself included—if you'll be good enough to step into the dory without a struggle."

Without a word, Judith stepped to the rail and, as Barcus lurched, swung herself overside into the dory.

Immediately Alan cast off, and as the little boat sheered off, Barcus, with a sigh of relief, brought the Seaventure once more back upon her course.

For some few minutes there was silence between the two men, while the tender dropped swiftly astern, the woman plying a brisk pair of oars.

Then, suddenly elevating his nose, Barcus sniffed audibly. "Here," he said sharply, "relieve me for a minute, will you? I want to go forward and have a look at that motor."

In the time that he remained invisible between decks the fisherman luffed, picked up the dory and its occupant, and came round again in open chase of the Seaventure.

When Barcus reappeared it was with a grave face.

"The devil and the deep sea," he observed obscurely, coming aft, "from all their works, good Lord deliver us!"

"What's the trouble now?"

"Nothing much—only your playful little friend has been up to another of her light-hearted tricks. . . . If you should happen to want a smoke or anything to eat when you go below, just find a mirror and kiss yourself good-by before striking the match. The drain-cocks of both fuel tanks have been opened, and there are upwards of a hundred and fifty gallons of highly explosive gasoline floating around in the bilge!"

CHAPTER XIII.

No Quarter.

"Yes, yes," said Mr. Barcus indulgently, breaking a long silence. "Very interesting. Very interesting, indeed. I've seldom listened to a more entertaining life-history, my poor young friend. But I tell you candidly, as man to man, I don't believe one word of it. It's all a—foolishness!"

His voice took on a plaintive accent. "Particularly this!" he expostulated, and waved an indignant hand, compassing their plight.

"The rest of your adventures are reasonable enough," he said, "they won my credulity—and I'm a native of Missouri. But this last chapter is impossible. And that's flat. It couldn't happen—and has. And there, in a manner of speaking, we are!"

Against the western horizon a long, low-lying strip of sand dunes rested like a bar of purple cloud between the crimson afterglow of sunset in the sky and the ensanguined sea that mirrored it.

The wind had gone down with the sun, leaving the Seaventure becalmed—her motor long since inert for want of fuel—in shoal water a mile or so off the desolate and barren coast that Barcus, out of his bounding knowledge of those waters, named Nauset Beach.

Still another mile farther off shore the so-called Gloucester fisherman rode, without motion, waters as still and glassy. Through the gloaming, with the aid of glasses, figures might be seen moving about her decks; and as it grew still more dark she lowered a small boat that theretofore had swung in davits. A little later a faint humming noise drifted across the tide.

"Power tender," the owner of the Seaventure interpreted. "Coming to call, I presume. Sociable lot. What I can't make out is why they seem to think it necessary to tow our dory back. Uneasy conscience, maybe—what?"

He lowered the binoculars and glanced inquiringly at his employer, who granted him a dissent, and said no more.

"Don't take it so hard, old top," Barcus advised with a change of tone from irony to sympathy. Then he rose and dived down the companionway, presently to reappear with a megaphone and a double-barreled shotgun.

"No cutting-out parties in this outfit," he explained, grinning amiably. "None of that old stuff, revised to suit your infatuated female friend—once aboard the higger and the man is mine!"

Stationing himself at the seaward rail, where his figure would show in sharp silhouette against the glowing sunset sky, he brandished the shotgun at arm's length above his head, and bellowed sternly through the megaphone:

"Keep off! Keep off! This means you! Come within gunshot and I'll blow your fool heads off!"

Putting aside the megaphone, he sat down again. "Not that I'd dare fire this blunderbuss," he confided, "with this reek of gasoline; but just for moral effect. Phew-w! I'd give a dollar for a breath of clean air; I've inhaled so much gas in the last few hours I'm dry-cleaned down to my ally-old toes!"

How Whole Swiss Village Moved Over to Wisconsin

Will history repeat itself? When this present European war is over, will there be an exodus from the ruined and charred villages and countryside of Europe to the United States. Such a thing is possible. It may come to pass. Once, long ago, in the history of Wisconsin, a whole Swiss village moved from its home in Europe to this state and settled New Glarus. Frederick Merk, state historical society researcher, writes of this village, which appeared in the following article, which appeared in the Milwaukee Free Press, and is most interesting in detail.

Wisconsin contains no first Swiss colony at New Glarus, in the northern part of Green county, which is soon to celebrate its seventieth anniversary. It is a record of extreme poverty and privation, of much suffering and little joy, yet withal a pleasing story of successful enterprise and industry well rewarded.

It was no ordinary need that in 1844 sent these Swiss mountaineers from their homes to the new world. The village of Glarus, from their inhospitable yet beloved homes, poverty drove them forth, not such to merely as curtailed luxuries and pleasures, but the grinding need that menaced the food which the children ate and spurred the father to the need to hold off the biting frosts. It was a period of crop failures, of industrial stagnation. An overcrowded population, which even in harvest could win but the bare necessities from a sterile soil, now faced actual starvation.

Over the sea the wonderful America, where land was measured by the yard, but by the acres, called forth its invitation. In 1844 a public meeting was called at the village of Schwanden in the Canton of Glarus, Switzerland, to request the Council of the Canton to co-operate in an organized plan of emigration. The council welcomed the opportunity to relieve the pressure of population upon the soil, and appropriated 1,500 forins, amounting to $600 in American money, to send forward the first contingent.

The meager fund was increased by individual and parish subscriptions to about $2,000, and the venture was ready to start.

Careful instructions were drawn up for the guidance of the two agents in the location of lands for the colony. The lands were to be chosen in a body, preferably in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois or Missouri, climate, soil and general characteristics were to be as nearly as possible as they were in the home. A fund of $3,000 forins, about $2,000 was entrusted to their care, with which they were to pay for the lands at a rate that should give each prospective emigrant at least twenty acres.

Two Pioneers Come Over.

On March 16, 1845, the two pioneers embarked in a sailing packet at Havre for New York. A stormy and wearisome journey of almost two months brought them, on May 6, to their destination. Thence, accompanied by a guide to whom they had been recommended, they proceeded by steam, railroad and stage to the new settlement. They found there, to their disappointment, that all the desirable timber land in the district had been sold, and only the prairies remained for settlement. Like most European emigrants they did not recognize the fertile prairie lands of the northwest, and to their instructions, continued on their search for a region like that of their fatherland. Up and down through Illinois and Indiana they wandered, until they wandered on their quest, unable to find a suitable location, until on June 24, they arrived, weary and discouraged, at Exeter, in the territory of Wisconsin. Here, in the hills of Green county, they were overjoyed to find just such lands as they had hoped for and on July 17 they concluded to purchase 1,200 acres with eighty additional acres of timber. With glad hearts they now commenced the building of their new homes.

Impatient to Start Colony.

In the meantime the fever for emigration at home had become almost uncontrollable. The original plan had been to delay departure until spring of 1846, by which time the pioneers could have prepared for their arrival but the pressure became so great that it was necessary, in order to hold the group together, to change the date for the migration to April 16, 1845.

The eventful day arrived, and 193 persons of all ages and conditions, with sack and tools and young stock and furniture, were gathered in picturesque array on the banks of one of the canals of the Rhine. A fearful farewell was said to relatives and friends, more of whom they were never to see again, and they were off to the new world and a kinder fate.

Hard Trip Down Rhine.

The trip down the Rhine was one of great hardship and suffering. The weather turned to freezing, the boat was an open vessel which afforded no protection, and space was so limited that many could not find room to lie down. At Basel they transhipped for the coast, arriving at the seaport town of New Delpepe, after a weary journey of over two weeks.

The voyage across the Atlantic was one of those stern, stormy passages which so many of our Wisconsin forefathers knew. For forty-nine days they were tossed about in their frail sailing vessel, many of them sick with dysentery as a result of wretched food and exposure. Two of their little band died on the way, and the lowered with tearful ceremony into the waters. At length on June 30, they arrived at Baltimore, the worst of their troubles happily over.

The trip overland to St. Louis, by way of the wonderful Pennsylvania canal, was filled with sights and experiences that astonished and delighted them. Here was a land where the poorest gained a livelihood better than even the prosperous few in their old homes. Arrived at St. Louis, where they had arranged to meet their agent, they found to their dismay that nothing had been seen or heard of them. It was rumored that they had lost their lives in the wilds of the American frontier.

In the meantime the emigrants sent two of their number up the Mississippi in search of the missing agents. To tell of the wanderings of these searchers for place to place, painfully tracing the steps of those whom they sought, would require more space than this brief account permits. Suffice to say that they eventually came upon the first pioneers, busy at work upon the shelters at New Glarus.

Chance in Meeting.

One of the pioneers was now hastily dispatched to St. Louis, to the waiting colony. By fortunate chance he came upon them at Galena, Ill., whither they had advanced in their impatience to find their new homes. The journey to New Glarus was completed without further mishap, and on Aug. 15, 1845, they were on the site of their new homes.

Hardship and privation were the lot of these Swiss pioneers during the first years of their sojourn at New Glarus. They were accustomed, however, to rough and ready fare, were eager to work and willing to economize, and before many years their settlement became the center of a prosperous dairy industry. To this day the visitor in New Glarus may still see many of the quaint old Swiss customs, and hear the peculiar dialect of the pioneers who made Wisconsin their home almost three-quarters of a century ago.

Mementoes Preserved.

The museum of the Wisconsin State Historical society contains the nucleus of a collection of Swiss pioneer materials which it is hoped to increase largely while popular interest is at its height. The printed collection of the Wisconsin Historical society, volumes VII and XII, contain several interesting articles on New Glarus colony by John Luchsinger, from which most of the information contained in this sketch has been gathered. Mr. Luchsinger is himself a good example of the sturdy stock of the Swiss migration contributed to the upbuilding of the new state. A sterling citizen, five times elected to the state legislature, he is a descendant in the eleventh generation of the sister of Ulrich Zwingli, the famous leader of the Protestant Reformation in Switzerland.

AMUSEMENTS

AT MYERS THEATRE.

Did you ever stop to think that every American taxpayer, citizen and voter has, or should have, a direct and personal interest in all other sort and kind of those "wards of fortune" who live in our jails, reformatories, homes for the defective and penitentiaries? In the new four act drama which will be presented at Myers Theatre tonight for one performance, every woman who has acquired or hopes to exercise the woman's right of suffrage will find a new value for her vote and a new meaning for her power in citizenship.

Every mother, wife, sister, sweetheart and daughter will find a personal appeal to herself in "The Under Dog" because in this powerful play the authors of "The Traffic," Miss Bailey, the playwrights, have asked, houses every night. "The realism,

"The Under Dog" contrives to ask these questions even while it presents a fascinating, powerful, intensely human and—in some passages—horrorous drama of an actual phase of American life in every community. It contains a most interesting and charming group of very human characters and its story sweeps through three acts of mountain ginster, virile action, clever dialogue and breathless climaxes. Dealing with a vital phase of life, it is yet innocent of any suggestive shock to the morals or proprieties and wins you by the sheer beauty and strength of its story.

APOLLO THEATRE

"The Littlest Rebel"

Chicago papers were unanimous in their praise of "The Littlest Rebel" when it appeared there at the Studebaker Theatre this summer. This Bailey, the playwrights, have asked, houses every night. "The realism, the vital and imminent question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" and answered it in their new play. The "brother" they mean is your brother, our brother, in every jail, reformatory, and penitentiary in the United States. Are we reforming them? Or are we making a mistake and barbarous? Are we making hardened and embittered criminals out of men and boys whose worst crimes are trivial compared with the brutality, the known filth and the evil associations which are heaped upon them in this managed dungeons, cells and "black holes?"

SCENE FROM "THE UNDER DOG" AT MYERS THEATRE.

the thrills and pathos injected into the greatest of all war time spectacles makes this a play worthy only of the good success it deserves. This is but one of the lines the news critics have used in their praise of "The Littlest Rebel" which is being shown at the Apollo tonight.

Mimi Yvonne, the little actress in the title role, has an unusually capable ability that is well worth the envy of others probably better known. She was made for the role she portrays; she could not be better fitted for it if she had actually lived the life of little Virgie, the real heroine of the story.

For Manly Men

We have purposely made up a tobacco to appeal to the strong, vigorous man who wants full flavor and fragrance combined with natural sweetness in his pipe-smoke. This tobacco is STANDARD. It was put on the market fifty years ago especially to satisfy the tobacco hungry man. It has filled the bill.

Firemen, policemen, out-of-doors men, two fisted men in general, all say STANDARD satisfies. Once they start using STANDARD they cannot get the same satisfaction out of any other brand.

STANDARD

Long Cut Tobacco

has character to it. That's why it appeals to and pleases these men of sturdy character.

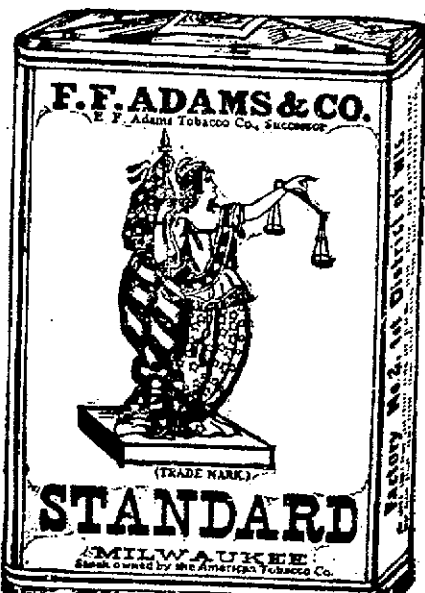

STANDARD is made from pure Kentucky leaf, aged for three to five years, so as to bring out slowly and naturally all the mellowness and richness of the tobacco. That's why its quality never varies—and that's why hurried-up, hashed-up tobaccos can't compare with STANDARD.

In the strenuous hours of work or in the pleasant hours of relaxation, be sure to have some of this wonderful tobacco with you.

Just try STANDARD for a week—and you'll keep right on using it.

THE WAR AND TRADE.
That the present war will be an impetus to American trade is thought certain. Countries which have dependent upon the European factories for their supplies are left without warning with a decided shortage.
The question now is, can the United States fill the places and take over this business? The men who have given it close study believe that it can be done and already steps are being taken to assure the success of the venture. If it is possible to do this it will mean the re-opening of many factories that have been forced to close down or run on half time for months past owing to the general depression of trade. Perhaps this war is psychological, just as the trade depression was, but still it is here and the United States must do its share in supplying the world with manufactured goods as well as foodstuffs.

STATE POLITICS.
The ultra progressives are dying
They can't appreciate the "God's patient poor" have of their bossism and their arrogance of handling state affairs.
Decided upon a radical change, consequently their cries of alarm high heaven in predicting all of dire disaster to come to Wisconsin during the next two years.

Samuel M. Phillips as their candidate for governor and selecting Whitman, Dray, Whitman, and others to back him up legislature, the voters of the state have shown great wisdom. They nominated good, strong men object is to work for the best of the state and of the taxpayer who has been burdened with taxation until it was almost unbearable until it broke the back.

There will be no radical changes in management except the curtailment of expenses, the reduction of the cost of the enactment of laws that are already on the statute books. There will be no real revolution. The results follow which the present predict. The state will be lightened, the taxpayer will be freighted by the change. This is a frighten the voter, but they frighten the bogey man now and act afraid.

talk of a third ticket is dying it may be a possibility but it is doubtful. It would not do for the present republicans and democrats to combine and form a third ticket for political reasons. It would be a breach of faith for them to do so and thus lose their standing with the voters. The voters of the state are not so easily duped as they were in the past. They will not permit such a move to take place.

Tuesday the various candidates will meet at Madison to decide platform upon which they will run. The campaign. The campaign will be won on the home front. The primary was won on the home front and it is to be won again. The platform decided will follow along the lines laid out by this organization which has accomplished its purpose by winning the voters to the real platform.

ONE-SIDED REPORTS.
The morning's dispatches from the front show that the Allies have driven the Germans back from Paris.
The Russians have gained wonderful victories in Austria and Eastern Europe and the Serbs are rushing forward on the south. Meager news from the German and Austrian fronts indicate that they claim victories for their armies.
The Russian forces are being backed, that the Serbs are losing ground and that the advance of the Allies is proving most satisfying.

It is a question of "pay money and take your choice."
The censors of Europe have the bottled up that the arrival of the army of Russia in Belgium has been concealed until the fighting line. Meanwhile the conflict is being waged and is victorious in the west.
The horrible results that follow already being felt throughout Europe and it is just a beginning of the calamity that has come upon the world through the jealousy of Empires and their greed for power and territory.

THE WATERWORKS.
The railroad commission has that the new rates, which were some two years ago, relating to the Janesville Water company, be put in force by October 1st.
The dispatch that announced this order also stated that a protest would be filed in the Dane county circuit court by the attorney for the water company to prevent this until the question of the price the city is to pay for the plant is decided upon.

While it is a question if the city will gain anything by owning the Water company in the end, the voters have decided they want it and the quicker the transfer is made the better pleased the general public will be.
The question of ownership of the plant is one that has caused more or less unfavorable comment of the present city administration, but it has been by persons who are not acquainted with the slow procedure necessary to bring the transfer about.
It is safe to say that all speed possible is being made to consummate the deal and that shortly the city will control the plant and the taxpayer find his tax bill increased in consequence.

Now that school has really begun and the years work commenced it is a question that the authorities will not neglect to instruct the children in the way of protecting themselves in case of fire. Fire drills are as essential a part of their instruction as learning their lessons and it is not sufficient to merely teach them how to march in and out of the building at recess time and when dismissed to bring home this lesson to them.

Next week the state fair throws its gates open to the public. It is going to be a great exhibit, if the words of the press agent can be believed, and it is a pity that the thousands of visitors who will be here to see the exhibits will not witness any better showing of the state's resources than the fair no matter what horses start.

This talk about a Rock county man,
L. C. Whitett, being named as speaker of the next assembly, grows apace throughout the state. Mr. Whitett is a man of sound judgment and would make a most admirable presiding officer of the next legislature which has a most important work to accomplish.

Militia officers at Butte, Montana, believing in all the trappings of a war zone have established a press censorship. This is a good one. We learned of snipers from Vera Cruz and the press censorship from Europe.
What next?
Today the citizens of Illinois are holding a primary at which candidates for the United States senate are to be nominated. It will be interesting to watch what part the women vote has in the selection.

On The Spur of The Moment

The Traveler.
When the fellow who's traveled around brags in and flops himself down in our best easy chair;
The fellow who's traveled around the everywhere;
It is surely a pleasure to gossip with him.
He's welcome to us as a breath of fresh air.

He's been 'round the world and he's broadened a lot.
He thinks and he speaks with a vigor
and vim.
He is active in mind and he's active in limb.
He has brushed up against all the races and sects.
And there's not a thought that is narrow in him.
He has seen all the best and he's seen all the worst.
And he's full of ideas that are really worth while.
Which he tells you about in a rare breezy style.
He has got it, four ways, from the old world deuce,
On the fellow who has never traveled a mile.
He is not at all versed in the petty affairs.
On all village scandal he places the news of the big word events he will scan.
And he knows what Life means, for he's seen it himself.
In other words, travel has made him
A MAN.

And Newspapers Are So Cheap.
"I hope," said the Portly Gentleman on the rear platform of the street car, "hope that the English will teach those trenchmen a good lesson. They need it."
"Well," replied a Thin Person with side whiskers, "England whipped 'em once at Waterloo and she can do it again. With Germany helping England there will be nothing to it. The allies will be in Paris in a fortnight."
"The Germans ain't helping the English," said the conductor. "The Germans are helping the Russians whip Serbia. I have just been reading the dispatches from Nish. I always read the Nish dispatches, because Nish is the only town in Europe that I can pronounce. It looks as though the Servians and Austrians combined can hold off the Germans and Russians until England whips France. Then look out."
At any rate, "interrupted the Portly Gentleman, "hope that when England cleans up France she will wipe out Russia. The Kaiser of Russia is too important. He is about as highstrung as the czar of Germany. It looks as though England has her hands full right now trying to capture Belgium. Nary little country, that. Belgium, you know, sides in with the Germans."
"Emperor Franz Josef of Switzerland and Victor Emmanuel of Montenegro seem to be pretty ready to clash," said the thin person. "And when they do, you watch Turkey.
Turkey is going to gobble up Bel-

CHAPTER IV.

"We'll give them fit for tat."

It was not a whole man there; it was a place of a man, the head and shoulders of a man that trailed down into a ragged darkness and a pool of shining black.

And even as she stared the mound above her swayed and crumbled, and a rush of hot water came pouring over her. Then it seemed to her that she was dragged downward.

When the rather brutish young aviator with the bullet head and the black hair cropped "en brosse" who was in charge of the French special scientific corps heard presently of this disaster to the war control he was so wanting in imagination in any sphere but his own that he laughed. Small matter to him that Paris was burning. His mother and father and sister lived at Caudebec, and the only sweetheart he had ever had—and it was poor love making then—was a girl in Rouen. He slipped his second in command on the shoulder. "Now," he said, "there's nothing on earth to stop us going to Berlin and giving them fit for tat. Strategy and reasons of state—they're over. Come along, my boy, and we'll just show these old women what we can do when they let us have our heads."

He spent five minutes telephoning, and then he went out into the courtyard of the chateau in which he had been installed and shouted for his automobile. Things would have to move quickly, because there was scarcely an hour and a half before dawn. He looked at the sky and noted with satisfaction a heavy bank of clouds athwart the pallid east.

He was a young man of infinite shrewdness, and his material and aeroplane were scattered all over the countryside, stuck away in barns, covered with hay, hidden in woods. A hawk could not have discovered any of them without coming within reach of a gun. But that night he only wanted one of the machines, and it was handy and quite prepared under a tarpaulin between two ricks not a couple of miles away. He was going to Berlin with that and just one other man. Two men would be enough for what he meant to do.

He had in his hands the black complement to all those other gifts science was urging upon unregenerate mankind, the gift of destruction, and he was an adventurous rather than a sympathetic type.

He was a dark young man, with nothing negro about his gleaming eyes. He smiled like one who is favored and anticipates great pleasures. There was an exotic richness, a chuckling flavor, about the voice in which he gave his orders, and he pointed his remarks with the long finger of a hand that was hairy and exceptionally big.

"We'll give them fit for tat," he said. "We'll give them fit for tat. No time to lose, boys."

And presently over the cloud banks that lay above Westphalia and Saxony the swift aeroplane, with its atomic engine as noiseless as a dancing sunbeam and its phosphorescent microscopic compass, flew like an arrow to the heart of the central European continent.

It did not soar very high. It skimmed a few hundred feet above the banked darknesses of cumulus that hid the world, ready to plunge at once into their wet obscurities should some hostile fier range into vision. The tense young steersman divided his attention between the guiding stars above and the level, tumbling surfaces of the vapor strata that hid the world below. Over great spaces those banks lay as even as a frozen lava flow and almost as still, and then they were rent by ragged areas of transparency, pierced by clear chasms, so that dim patches of the land below gleamed remotely through abysses. Once he saw quite distinctly the plan of a big railway station outlined in lamps and signals and once the flames of a burning rick showing livid through a boiling drift of smoke on the side of some great hill. But if the world was masked it was alive with sounds. Up through that vapor floor came the deep roar of trains, the whistles of horns of motorcars, a sound of rifle fire away to the south and as he drew near his destination the crowing of cocks.

The sky above the indistinct horizons of this cloud sea was at first starry and then paler, with a light that crept from north to east as the dawn came on. The Milky way was invisible in the blue and the lesser stars vanished. The face of the adventurer at the steering wheel, darkly visible ever and again by the oval greenish glow of the compass face, had something of that firm beauty which all concentrated purpose gives, and something of the happiness of an idiot child that has at last got hold of the matches. His companion, a less imaginative type, sat with his legs spread wide over the long, coffin shaped box which contained in its compartments the three atomic bombs, the new bombs that would continue to explode indefinitely and which no one so far had ever seen in action. Hitherto carbolium, their essential substance, had been tested only in almost infinitesimal quantities within steel chambers embedded in lead. Beyond the thought of great destruction slumbering in the black spheres between his legs, and a keen resolve to follow out very exactly the instructions that had been given him, the man's mind was a blank. His aquiline profile against the starlight expressed nothing but a profound gloom. The sky below grew clearer as the central European capital was approached.

So far they had been singularly lucky and had been challenged by no aeroplanes at all. The frontier scouts they must have passed in the night; probably these were mostly under the clouds. The world was wide, and they had had luck in not coming close to any soaring sentinel. Their machine was painted a pale gray that lay almost invisibly over the cloud levels below. But now the east was flushing with the near ascent of the sun. Berlin was but a score of miles ahead, and the luck of the Frenchmen held. By imperceptible degrees the clouds below dissolved.

Away to the northeastward in a cloudless pool of gathering light and with all its nocturnal illuminations still blazing was Berlin. The left finger of the steersman verified roads and open spaces below upon the mica covered square of map that was fastened by his wheel. There, in a series of lakelike expansions was the Havel away to the right, over by those forests must be Spandau. There the river split about the Potsdam island, and right ahead was Charlottenburg, cleft by a great thoroughfare that fell like an indicating beam of light straight to the imperial headquarters. There, plain enough, was the Tiergarten; beyond rose the imperial palace, and to the right those tall buildings, those clustering beflagged, benighted roofs, must be the offices in which the central European staff was housed. It was all coldly clear and colorless in the dawn.

He looked up suddenly as a humming sound grew out of nothing and became swiftly louder. Nearly overhead a German aeroplane was circling down from an immense height to challenge him. He made a gesture with his left arm to the gloomy man behind and then gripped his little wheel with both hands, crouched over it and twisted his neck to look upward. He was attentive, tightly strung, but quite contemptuous of their ability to hurt him. No German alive he was assured could outfly him, or, indeed, any one of the best Frenchmen. He imagined they might strike at him as a hawk strikes, but they were men coming down out of the bitter cold up there, in a hungry, spiritless morning mood. They came slanting down like a sword swung by a lazy man, and not so rapidly, but that he was able to slip away from under them and get between them and Berlin. They began challenging him in German with a megaphone when they were still perhaps a mile away. The words came to him, rolled up into a mere blob of hoarse sound. Then, gathering alarm from his grim silence, they gave chase and swept down a hundred yards above him perhaps and a couple of hundred behind. They were beginning to understand what he was. He ceased to watch them and concentrated himself on the city ahead, and for a time the two aeroplanes raced.

A bullet came tearing through the air by him, as though some one was tearing paper. A second followed. Something tapped the machine. It was time to act. The broad avenues, the park, the palaces below rushed ec, widening out nearer and nearer to them.

"Ready!" said the steersman.

The gaunt face hardened to grimness, and with both hands the bomb thrower lifted the big atomic bomb from the box and stended it against the slide. It was a black sphere two feet in diameter. Between its handles was a little celluloid stud, and to this he bent his head until his lips touched it. Then he had to bite in order to let the air in upon the inductive. Sure of its accessibility, he craned his neck over the side of the aeroplane and judged his pace and distance. Then very quickly he bent forward, bit the stud and hoisted the bomb over the side.

"Round," he whispered inaudibly.

The bomb flashed blinding scarlet in midair and fell, a descending column of blaze eddying spirally in the midst of a whirlwind. Both the aeroplanes were tossed like shuttlecocks, hurled high and sideways, and the steersman with gleaming eyes and set teeth fought in great banking curves for a balance. The gaunt man clung tight with hands and knees; his nostrils dilated, his teeth biting his lips. He was firmly strapped.

When he could look down again it was like looking down upon the crater of a small volcano. In the open garden before the imperial castle a shuddering star of evil splendor spurted and poured up smoke and flame toward them like an accusation. They were too high to distinguish people clearly or mark the bomb's effect upon the building until suddenly the facade tottered and crumbled before the flare as sugar dissolves in water. The man stared for a moment, showed all his long teeth, and then staggered into the cramped standing position his straps permitted, hoisted out and bit another bomb and sent it down after its fellow.

The explosion came this time more directly underneath the aeroplane and shot it upward edgewise. The bomb box tipped to the point of disengagement, and the bomb thrower was pitched forward upon the third bomb with his face close to its celluloid stud. He clutched its handles and, with a sudden gust of determination that the thing should not escape him, bit its stud. Before he could hurl it over the monoplane was slipping sideways. Everything was falling sideways. Instinctively he gave himself up to gripping, his body holding the bomb in its place.

Then that bomb had exploded, and steersman, thrower and aeroplane were just flying rags and splinters of metal and drops of moisture in the air, and a third column of fire rushed eddying down upon the doomed buildings below.

Never before in the history of warfare had there been a continuing explosive. Indeed, up to the middle of the twentieth century the only explosives known were combustibles whose explosiveness was due entirely to their instantaneity, and these atomic bombs which science burst upon the world that night were strange even to the men who used them. Those used by the allies were lumps of pure carbolium, painted on the outside with unoxidized cydonator inductive enclosed hermetically in a case of membranum. A little celluloid stud between the handles by which the bomb was lifted was arranged so as to be easily torn off and admit air to the inductive, which at once became active and set up radio activity in the outer layer of the carbolium sphere. This liberated fresh inductive, and so in a few minutes the whole bomb was blazing continual explosions. The central European bombs were the same, except that they were larger and had a more complicated arrangement for animating the inductive.

Always before in the development of warfare the shells and rockets fired had been but momentarily explosive, they had gone off in an instant once for all, and if there was nothing living or valuable within reach of the concussion and the flying fragments, then they were spent and over. But carbolium, which belonged to the B group of Hyslop's so called "suspended degeneration" elements, once its degenerative process had been induced, continued a furious radiation of energy, and nothing could arrest it. Or all Hyslop's artificial elements, carbolium was the most heavily furred with energy and the most dangerous to make and handle. To this day it remains the most potent degenerative known. What the earlier twentieth century chemists called its half period was seventeen days—that is to say, it poured out half of the huge store of energy in its great molecules in the space of seventeen days, the next seventeen days' emission was a half of that first period's outpouring, and so on. As with all radio-active substances, this carbolium, though every seventeen days its power is halved, though constantly it diminishes toward the impossible, is never actually exhausted, and to this day the battlefields and bomb fields of that frantic time in human history are sprinkled with radiant matter and so centers of inconceivable rays.

What happened then when the celluloid stud was opened was that the inductive oxidized and became active. Then the surface of the carbolium began to degenerate. This degeneration passed only slowly into the substance of the bomb. A moment or so after its explosion began it was still mainly an inert sphere exploding superficially, a big, inanimate nucleus wrapped in flame and thunder. Those that were thrown from aeroplanes fell in this state. They reached the ground still mainly solid and, melting soil and rock in their progress, bored into the earth. There as more and more of the carbolium became active the bomb spread itself out into a monstrous cavern of fiery energy at the base of what became very speedily a miniature active volcano. The carbolium, unable to disperse freely, drove into and mixed up with a boiling confusion of molten soil and superheated steam and so remained, spinning furiously and maintaining an eruption that lasted for years or months or weeks, according to the size of the bomb employed and the chances of its dispersal. Once launched the bomb was absolutely unapproachable and uncontrollable until its forces were nearly exhausted, and from the crater that burst open above it puffs of heavy incandescent vapor and fragments of viciously punitive rock and mud, saturated with carbolium and each a center of searing and blistering energy, were flung high and far.

Such was the crowning triumph of military science, the ultimate explosive that was to give the "decisive touch" to war.

LIKE HEAVEN'S DRAUGHT

A Turbine Machine Which Imitates a Delightful Summer Rainfall.

For the purpose of watering a stretch of green grass nature has supplied the very best thing in the shape of a rainfall which is distributed over the area evenly and in such quantities that allow the water to sink into the earth instead of running off into the low places. A sprinkling machine which imitates more closely the action of a gentle summer rain than anything else has been introduced and is shown in the accompanying cut. It works on the turbine principle and the pressure of water drives a wheel which interrupts and breaks up the steam in such a manner that the water is evenly deposited on a large area. The efficiency of this machine is largely regulated by the available water pressure and where this is good it is possible to cover an area of 500 square yards. It is supported on a base built like a sled so that it is a simple matter to pull it about the lawn without interfering with the operations even for a few minutes.

Dinner Stories

A working man called to see an astronomer one day, and said he wanted to see the moon through the telescope.

"Certainly!" replied the scientist;

"and if you'll come back this evening I'll be glad to let you use the telescope."

"Can't I see it now?" asked the man in evident astonishment.

"No, I'm afraid not," said the astronomer, "you must wait till the evening."

"But, bless ye!" exclaimed the man, "I can see it myself at night without any old telescope. And he walked off with an air of great disgust."

"Who is that man who laughs so ecstatically every time a wave causes the ship to lean to one side," asked the passenger on an excursion steamer.

"He thinks he's doing it," replied the captain. "We bring him along to keep him from causing any real damage. He's the man who rocks the boat."

"It's hard to tell just what the public wants these days," said the theater manager, with a sigh.

"It hasn't struck me that way," replied the treasurer. "It seems painfully easy to me. In nine cases out of ten it wants its money back."

"It is my highest wish," said he very fervently, "to make your life happy forever."

"Well, then," replied the dear girl, "let us be friends once more—and never propose to me again."

IN THE GOOD OLD SUMMER TIME He—Gladys seems to be enjoying herself more than ever this summer. She—Yes, indeed. She is already engaged to three different men, and she has only been here two weeks.

A UNIQUE RECORD

Very Few Like It in Our Broad Republic.

Home testimony for Doan's Kidney Pills, published in every locality, is of itself convincing evidence of merit. Confirmed testimony forms still stronger evidence. Years ago, a citizen of Janesville gratefully acknowledged the benefit derived from Doan's Kidney Pills. The statement is now confirmed—the proof more convincing. Cases of this kind are plentiful in the work of Doan's Kidney Pills—the record is unique.

Mrs. Emilie Hell, 266 Riverside St., Janesville, says: "I suffered terribly from pains through the small of my back for months. I had severe pains in my head and my kidneys didn't act regularly. I was feeling miserable when someone told me to get Doan's Kidney Pills. I got a supply at the People's Drug Co. and used two or three boxes. They made me well again. I still take Doan's Kidney Pills once in awhile and they keep me in good shape. You may continue to use the recommendation—I have given Doan's Kidney Pills before."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Hell had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

So many people suffer from weak, inactive sluggish kidneys, and don't know what ails them. All tired out and miserable—run down and nervous—sleep poorly and no appetite—pain in back and sides—swollen ankles and joints—bladder weaknesses—that's kidney trouble. You need the medicine that stops the cause of your trouble. That's exactly what FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS do. They are tonic and strengthening, build up your kidneys, reduce swellings, make you feel fit, active and energetic again. They are a wonder to those using them. Try them yourself. Contain no habit forming drugs. Do not accept a substitute.

ONE shape Tom Moore has the same aroma of every other. The quality never varies.

But the "Monarch" size, we must admit, is the handsomest. About five inches long and has a compact, man-size circumference.

His appearance is a fine proof of the skilled hand workmanship, that makes him. Draws splendidly; burns evenly to a brown snowy ash.

Next time you buy Tom Moore ask for the "Monarch" size.

HARD SCHEDULE FOR NOTRE DAME ELEVEN

Catholics in Initial Workout for Hardest Schedule Since History of School.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

South Bend, Sept. 9.—Notre Dame's football team, virtually as strong as the champion 1913 eleven, trotted out on the field this afternoon for the first workout of the season. The stiffest schedule in years looms ahead of the Catholics and Coach James Harper. His squad together twelve days before the western conference teams get down to official practice.

On paper, Notre Dame looks every bit as strong as the eleven of last year that laid claim to the western championship. The loss of Dorais at quarterback was a severe blow to the team. His brilliant field general attracted attention all over the country and it is not likely that Harper will develop a man this year completely fit his shoes.

But in Thorpe and Coffey, last year's team stars and Bergman, last year's backfield man, the Catholics have three candidates for the quarterback job from whom Harper should select an acceptable man. Two more must be developed but Harper has a wealth of material to work with. The old backfield, with Eichenlaub, Ballback and Pliska and Finnegan, the linemen, is intact this year and means much to Notre Dame's chances. The line will have practice ally the same make-up and for every position Harper has a strong bunch of reserve men.

The Yale game, of course, is the feature event of Notre Dame's 1914 schedule. The Catholics journey to New Haven on Oct. 17 for their first clash with the Blue. That is, one of the two big intersectional fights of the year, Michigan and Harvard furnishing the other. The Catholics have splendid prospects of trimming Yale.

The Carlisle-Notre Dame game, another big game on the schedule, will be played in Chicago Nov. 14. Because of the ill-feeling toward Notre Dame displayed by the Western conference authorities, Coach Harper was unable to get the use of Stagg field at the University of Chicago, though the Maroons were away at that date. The game will be played in the White Sox ball park and is expected to draw one of the biggest football crowds of the year in the Windy City.

The complete Notre Dame schedule follows:

Oct. 3.—Alma college at South Bend.

Oct. 10.—Rose Polytechnical Institute at South Bend.

Oct. 17.—Yale at New Haven.

Oct. 24.—South Dakota at Vermillion.

Oct. 31.—Haskell Indians at South Bend.

Nov. 7.—West Point at New York.

Nov. 14.—Carlisle at Chicago.

Nov. 26.—Syracuse at Syracuse.

THEY KNEW WHERE TO GET THE BEST

Thieves entered our store Monday night and selected their hunting supplies from our stock of Remington and Winchester arms and ammunition. The police are of the opinion that the robbery had been planned. They picked out the right store but they need not have broken in. Our prices are so reasonable there is little inducement to steal.

BRAVES TAKE LEAD BY BEATING GIANTS; CUBS NEAR THE TOP

James Allows Three Hits and Bests Marquard, 8 to 3.—O'Day's Men Defeat Reds in 10 Innings.

The Giants were beaten back in yesterday's battle with the Boston Braves, and were forced to take second position in the National League race, which news is about the most interesting that can be had today in baseballdom or elsewhere. Hub twirler James, allowing three hits, and as cool as the mighty Colossus, is responsible for the climb of the Braves yesterday. Marquard, veteran pitcher of the Giants, was unable to stop the rush of his opponents, and thus the teams stand today in first and second places, with the Braves on top, and still favorites in the race for honors.

But right back in Chicago there is still another attitude taken. The Chicago Cubs, dark horses of the last two weeks, are gradually crawling up to the top. They are too stubborn too, and are liable to make things interesting for the Braves and Giants within the next few days or couple of weeks at the most. If the Cubs can topple the Giants, then a classy little contest can be looked for between the Cubs and Braves. The Cubs won from the Reds yesterday, after ten innings, 4 to 3. Schultz hit a timely two-bagger in the tenth and sent Good across the plate for the deciding run. Zabel relieved Lavender, who was rather unsteady. The former finished today, Philadelphia plays at Boston in a double-header, while Brooklyn is at New York.

J. E. Bond, the star sprinter of the University of Michigan, is destined to step into the shoes of Olympic Champion Ralph Craig if Coach Farrell is enthusiastic. Bond's chances to hang up records and follow in the steps of Craig.

"You may think I'm kidding, but I still stick to my original statement that Bond is a sure comer in the sprints," Farrell declares. "You know I've got Craig's style down pretty pat, so that when I made the statement that Bond is the nearest approach to him I ought to know what I'm talking about."

"It takes time and great pains to develop a youngster into a champion sprinter. You can't do it in a day or a week. You must take him along easy, teach him the various angles of start and finish, etc., and then drum it into his head that he must learn the crouch if he expects to win championships."

"Of Bond, I must say he has shown good form, and he is the sort of boy who is always willing to listen to reason. That's what makes me think Michigan has found a capable substitute for the great Craig."

The National League has insured their whole umpire staff. Most of it is accident insurance. Most of the league players are anxiously studying the policies that they may learn the technique of accidents and what legally comprises an accident, and so on. They are said to be eager to learn whether a good stiff kick on the jaw is an accident, and if so, would the insurance absolve them from fines.

Clyde Milan said the surgeon advised him that he will be ready to jump into the diamond strife as soon as he has regained his strength. He lost thirteen pounds, and as soon as he commenced to exercise gained five pounds, only to lose this later. Milan does not look particularly strong, but says he feels so well that he will go to work as soon as Griffith gives the word.

Boston, Sept. 9.—If Dr. Osler, who believes in chloroforming everybody at the age of forty, should give the Boston Braves the once over he would in all likelihood be more than pleased. It looks as if the Philadelphia Athletics have the coming left-hander of the country in Raymond Bressler, who was with the Harrisburg State league team last year. When Mack signed Bressler it caused some comment, for while he was a promising youth, Tri-state sharps believed that there were several other players in this circuit who looked better than Bressler. But Mack makes few mistakes when it comes to selecting players.
